LISTEN, FRIEND; let us talk this matter over in a fair and square sort of way. You need glasses. I want to send you a pair. You may be scared they won't fit you. I stand ready to back them up by sending them to you, without you sending me a single cent or even a reference. I want to prove to you, at my own expense, that what I say about these glasses is true.

I claim that my Large Size "Perfect Vision" glasses will enable you to easily thread the needle in your sewing machine as well as the smallest-eyed needle you ever use—read the finest print—to see far or near—also to protect your eyes and prevent eye strain and eye pain, which usually cause headaches.

Furthermore, I claim that my Large Size "Perfect Vision" 10-Karat, Gold-filled Spectacles are the best and the most handsome looking you have ever seen.

I know that once you try them you will not want to part with them at any price, and I am ready to trust to your honest judgment.

They Will Enable You to Read The Finest Print, Thread A Small-Eyed Needle, or Shoot A Bird Off The Tallest Tree

IF YOU GO HUNTING OCCASIONALLY

I want you to put them on and try them out in the field, and see how these glasses will help you to sight your gun and take aim at your game.

With these Large Size "Perfect Vision" spectacles of mine, you will be able to shoot a bird off a tree easily, and this even if you are a very poor shot right now. I want you to try out these Large Size "Perfect Vision" spectacles of mine for reading and sewing, or for distance; for indoors, or outdoors, whichever you prefer. I don't want you to keep them unless they positively fit you better than any you have ever had before, and you can honestly tell me so. That is why

MR. BRYAN'S "REASONS"
(Omaha World-Herald.)

If Bryan would be a bit more candid in his fight against Senator Hitchcock he would at least compliment the intelligence of Nebraska Democrats.

When he says he is against Hitchcock because Hitchcock is "a toby of Wall Street" he insults their intelligence and raises a large question mark as to his own sincerity. He says that Hitchcock stood with "Wall Street" on the currency bill. The truth is that Senator Hitchcock stood for justice for the farming and live stock interests in his successful fight to amend the bill to permit banks to make loans on farms and to accept six months' agricultural and cattle loans as a basis of securing currency from the federal reserve banks. He fought for an amendment to equalize interest rates throughout the country, so that the people of the west could obtain, on the same class of security, loans out of money issued by the government at the same rate of interest charged in the east. He made a hard fight for an amendment for the guarantee of funds deposited in national banks, and while he won his fight in the Senate it was defeated in the House. Senator Hitchcock had the courage to fight to make a better bill of the currency bill, and in a large measure he succeeded. He then voted for the bill on final passage. His efforts to secure amendments were in the interest of his constituency, and when Mr. Bryan charges them up to Wall Street influence he proves himself either insincere or uninformed.

Mr. Bryan professes to oppose Hitchcock, further, because he was against the federal prohibition and suffrage amendments. The fact that Mr. Bryan himself never lifted a finger for either prohibition or suffrage when he was a candidate for office, and espoused both causes only after they became band wagon movements, again raises a doubt as to his entire candor. The prohibition fight is settled. As Mr. Bryan himself says "the saloon is as dead as slavery," and Hitchcock agrees with him. The present difference between the two, as to whether home use of harmless beverages should be permitted, does not rise to the dignity of a major issue. Woman suffrage is also a fight that is won, requiring the action of only one more state to establish it as the settled policy of the nation. Both issues are dead issues, and Mr. Bryan is not yet so old a man that he chooses to fight his political battles in the past.

As to practically all other issues of the past Mr. Bryan and Senator Hitchcock fought their battles side by side. They were together in support of tariff reform, the income tax, the popular election of senators, postal savings banks, the initiative and referendum, the direct primary, farm loan banks, the anti-trust law, the Alaskan railroad, the federal trades commission, the eight-hour day for railroad employes, and numerous other progressive measures. All these issues on which they were in harmony Mr. Bryan chooses to forget or ignore when he delves into the past for "reasons" to brand Hitchcock as a "reactionary" and a "tool of Wall Street."

So, too, does Mr. Bryan ignore some important recent points of difference. He makes no mention of the fact, as a reason for opposing Hitchcock, that the senator came to the support of the government when the clouds of war broke, piloting first the armed ships resolution and then the war resolution through the Senate as the president's spokesman, when Mr. Bryan had resigned in alarm from the cabinet and sought seclusion in his Florida and North Carolina summer homes.

Neither does Mr. Bryan mention that Senator Hitchcock led the fight for long months in the Senate for the ratification of the peace treaty and for the entry of the United States into membership in the league of nations to preserve the peace of the world. While Senator Hitchcock was holding up the president's hands Mr. Bryan was seeking to defeat and embarrass him by supporting the Lodge reservations in company with Smoot, Penrose, Brandegee and the other reactionary Republican leaders of the Senate. Only a few weeks ago, in a speech in Omaha, Mr. Bryan publicly and warmly commended Senator Hitchcock for his services in behalf of peace, for his determined fight to put down militarism and big armies and navies and to establish a reign of justice and good will in the world. Do these count for nothing now? Or has Mr. Bryan, in his antagonism to President Wilson as well as to Senator Hitchcock, seen reason to change his mind?

MINNESOTA DEMOCRATS FOR PROHIBITION

A Minneapolis dispatch, dated April 6 says: Fred B. Lynch of St. Paul, Democratic national committeeman, was elected a delegate at large to the national convention of the party after a lengthy and active session of the Democratic state convention here today. Chosen with him were A. C. Weiss, Duluth; D. D. Daly, Minneapolis, chairman of the state central committee, and Mrs. Peter Oleson, of Colquet. They and the twenty district delegates will go uninstructed to the San Francisco convention.

Mrs. Oleson was chosen by acclamation after she had attempted to withdraw her name in favor of Mr. Weiss, both party leaders hailing from the Eighth congressional district.

The Minnesota delegation will go to the San Francisco convention not only uninstructed, but free to vote as they please as individuals. The unit rule, a time-honored institution of the party, was attacked and beaten at the convention.

By its platform the convention endorsed the Wilson administration, declared the Republican leaders in the United States senate had "maimed" the treaty of Versailles and went on record as endorsing national prohibition. The resolutions also declared that the Democratic party was entitled to credit of enfranchising the women of the United States.
